My wonderings

Write, draw, talk or simply think. No answers to get right. Leave any question open.

What makes somewhere feel like home?

It might be a place, a living thing, a feeling, or something else.

What might a nest and a den have in common?

What might Wonder notice? What might the cormorant notice?

What could happen if we let a question stay unanswered for a while?

Wonder and the cormorant leave some space for silence.

A question of your own

Write, draw, talk or simply think. No answers to get right. Leave any question open.

I noticed…

Something small, surprising, familiar, or new.

I wonder…

What question would you like to keep beside you?

Your question continued

Write, draw, talk or simply think. No answers to get right. Leave any question open.

Another way to see it might be…

Imagine a different creature, person, place, or point of view.

I would like to explore…

You could draw, look closely, make something, or talk together.

You may read, download, print and share unchanged copies free of charge. Keep the title, Weidu Fanling / 未读凡灵 credit and this permission notice. Families, schools and libraries may make copies for shared reading. A printing service may charge for making those permitted copies. Adaptation and resale rights are not granted by this notice. Your own words and drawings remain yours.